Statement of Concern
By

Prof. Dr. Shashi Kant Tiwari

Author of Essentials of Repertorization (Approved Textbook in Homoeopathic Repertory, India)

I am Prof. Dr. Shashi Kant Tiwari, author of Essentials of Repertorization, an officially approved textbook in the subject of Homoeopathic Repertory in India. I have been teaching this subject for more than forty years, both at the undergraduate (BHMS) and postgraduate (MD) levels, in several universities across India and Canada.

In both these courses, Synthesis Repertory is a recommended text. Beyond academic circles, Synthesis - and its computerized version, RADAR—are immensely popular among Homoeopathic practitioners throughout India. Every teacher of Repertory knows that Synthesis was authored by Dr. Frederik Schroyens, and we have been proudly introducing him to generations of students as the creator of this monumental work.

I was therefore both shocked and deeply saddened to learn that Zeus has decided to remove Dr. Frederik Schroyens from the Synthesis team. This decision is disheartening and unacceptable to the global Homoeopathic community. It undermines the spirit of collective respect and gratitude owed to the man who has dedicated his life, intellect, and passion to the development of Synthesis and RADAR.

Dr. Schroyens is widely recognized as the architect and visionary behind these invaluable tools. His scholarly precision and unwavering commitment have elevated Synthesis into a cornerstone of modern Homoeopathic practice and education.

I firmly believe that his expertise, leadership, and vision remain indispensable to the continued growth and strengthening of Homoeopathy worldwide. The Homoeopathic fraternity stands united in the hope that Dr. Frederik Schroyens will be restored to his rightful place as the author and guiding force of Synthesis and RADAR, so that he may continue his exceptional contribution to this great rational system of healing.
